

Programme Specification

With effect from: September 2021

A programme specification is the definitive record of your programme of study at the University. It sets out the aims, learning outcomes, and indicative content of the programme. You should read this programme specification alongside the relevant module descriptors and the University's Taught Programme Academic Regulations.

This specification only applies to the delivery of the programme indicated below. The details in this specification are subject to change through the modifications or periodic review processes.

1 Programme name and award

This programme specification relates to the following award(s)

BSc (Hons) Psychology with Criminology

2 Aims of the programme

Rationale and general aims, including what is special about this programme

The BSc (Hons) Psychology with Criminology programme provides you with a firm grounding in all core areas of psychology, coupled with an opportunity to study selected topics in Criminology alongside this. The Criminology element of this programme explores the nature of crime, policing, and justice systems. It reflects on processes of criminalisation and victimisation, including responses to them that do not involve official (public) policing and the criminal justice system. It analyses social definitions of crime and criminal behaviours and reflects upon competing social, historical, and cultural concepts of justice and punishment.

The programme also focuses on the development of employability skills to enable you to be an ethically and socially responsible participant in your community and in your graduate career.

This is a combined honours programme which means that 75% of the module credits at each level will be Psychology and the remaining 25% will be Criminology.

The programme also explores and challenges the historical legacy of the social sciences. Psychology has, for example, throughout its history, privileged a white Westernised account of human behaviour, leading to the perpetuation of social inequality and social injustice for groups of people not reflected in that privileged view of the world. In tackling these issues, through, for example, the inclusion of issues of race and culture in a range of case studies, the programme asks you to consider what role the social sciences should play in the 21st Century.

The programme aims to:

1. develop your scientific and critical understanding of the mind, brain, behaviour and experience, and the complex interactions between these;
2. develop your critical understanding of criminological theory as applied to a range of concepts.
3. develop your research skills to allow you to investigate a range of experience and behaviour, including an evaluation of the ethical issues surrounding psychological research and practice;
4. develop your transferable personal, practical and intellectual skills to enable you to confidently pursue a graduate career;
5. provide you with the British Psychological Society (BPS) Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership (GBC), which is the first step towards a career as a Chartered Psychologist.

3 Level Learning Outcomes

Learning outcomes are expressed in terms of:

- Knowledge and understanding (K)
- Intellectual / cognitive / 'thinking' skills (I)
- Practical skills specific to the subject (P)
- Employability skills (E)

We design assessment tasks to enable you to demonstrate the level learning outcomes for your level of study. To a greater or lesser extent, all level learning outcomes are embedded into each assessment task. This means we can take a more integrated view of your overall performance at a level.

To progress to the next level, or to receive an award, you will need to satisfy the Level Learning Outcomes below and achieve credit as per the Taught Programme Academic Regulations.

Level Learning Outcomes Choose a level. Start with the 'award' level, e.g. 6 for UG programmes and work backwards
Level 6
K1	Detailed knowledge and sophisticated critical understanding of the range of core subject areas, including conceptual and historical issues in psychology, as defined by the British Psychological Society, including reference to recent scholarly resources and evidence, and the accurate use of scholarly conventions in so doing.
K2	Detailed knowledge and sophisticated critical understanding of a range of areas of criminology
K3	Critical understanding and application of a variety of methods of psychological research from design to dissemination and analysis, including quantitative and qualitative methods and approaches.

K4	A critical understanding of the inherent variability and diversity of psychological functioning, including the contribution of plurastic influences on this.
K5	A critical understanding of the contribution that psychology and criminology can make to the wider community and society and its role in promoting human values of equality and social justice.

3.1 External Benchmarks

Statement of congruence with the relevant external benchmarks

The programme is congruent with the QAA Benchmark Statements for Psychology (2019) and Criminology (2019) and the curriculum requirements of the British Psychological Society.

4 Indicative Content

Summary of content by theme

Psychology

You will study a curriculum designed to provide a thorough grounding in core domains (biological, cognitive, developmental, individual differences and social psychology), underpinning further study of specialised areas in the final year.

Criminology

The Criminology modules provide an introduction to criminological theory in the first year, and an application of criminology to crime, media and culture in the second year. In the final year, one module is chosen from a range of options that apply criminological theory to society, gender, justice, crime or policing.

Research Skills

Skills in research and analysis are introduced and developed in the skills modules in the first two years. This then culminates in an individual research project in the final year in which you will be supervised to design and undertake a small-scale piece of research in an area of your choice.

Professional and Personal Development

The programme is accredited by the British Psychological Society (BPS) as conferring eligibility for the Graduate Basis for Chartered Membership, provided the minimum standard of a Lower Second Class Honours is achieved. This is the first step towards becoming a Chartered Psychologist.

The programme also provides a balanced and career-relevant education for those not seeking a career in psychology. Embedded within the programme are professional skills, including a professional placement in each of the first two years. We also focus on assessment methods throughout the programme that help you to develop the kinds of skills that are valued by employers.

Your personal development is supported by your Personal Tutor who you will meet regularly to review your personal development goals and achievements.
