2. Aims of the programme

Rationale and general aims, including what is special about this programme (from the student's and a marketing perspective)

The aim of the Foundation Year is to provide you with an introduction to the main forms of analysis and critical debate applied within journalism and media. Through engagement with journalism (online, social media, print, radio and TV) and communication (how stories capture attention in documentaries, films, TV, drama) you will learn how the creative industries address various audience expectations across a range of media. Your insight and technical understanding will clarify what is involved in assessing, evaluating and critiquing work in journalism and media, but also how to design and create your own practical journalism in a range of formats.

You will be provided with an opportunity to actively develop your knowledge of a variety of debates and concepts whilst gaining specialised tuition in core academic skills. Within interactive sessions practice and production are encouraged as a way to understand analysis and evaluation, but also to bring these subjects alive, demonstrating the range and scope of their application. Through the deep understanding of these fundamental concepts and theories it is anticipated that your confidence and readiness for Level 4 study will be enhanced.

This programme offers you an alternative entry route for undergraduate study if you are not in a position to commence your university studies at Level 4. Therefore, the Journalism Studies Foundation Year pathway aims to provide access to higher education for students who may otherwise be excluded from university study. For example, you might not have the usual entry requirements to commence learning at Level 4. It is also intended to be a useful pathway for students who have been out of education for a number of years. You may also wish to further build your confidence before studying at Level 4. The Foundation Year in Journalism Studies pathway consequently endeavours to promote a widening of participation in higher education.

On completion of the Foundation Year, you should be well equipped to go on to Level 4 study on one of the named linked honours degree programmes in journalism. Students wishing to progress to the accredited programmes of BA Journalism, accredited by the NCTJ, or BA Broadcast Journalism, BJTC, must first pass a news test and an interview with a tutor in order to meet accreditation requirements. Students who do not wish to progress to an accredited programme may go on to study BA Sports Journalism or be considered for other BA programmes within the University.

7. Learning, teaching and assessment

7a) Statement of the strategy for learning, teaching and assessment for the programme

The learning and teaching provision on the Foundation Year in Journalism Studies is aligned with the central goals, objectives and features of the University's Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy 2020-23. It will provide an experience which is inclusive and engaged; professionally relevant; and a framework within which students are encouraged to begin to their abilities to engage in critical thinking and analytical skills. These are however contextualised within the nature of Level 3.

The following approaches are prioritised in the Foundation Year of the linked Journalism degrees:

Learning

The focus will be on ensuring that students have an opportunity to develop their understanding of key concepts that are introduced in each module by applying them through active enquiry, practical research tasks, exercises and collaborative projects.

A Progressive Learning Structure is built into the course design:

Students will begin their Level 3 by having an opportunity to develop their academic skills and confidence, before having an opportunity to apply these when they study a negotiated topic of choice for the Project module in Semester 2. How to effectively engage in academic writing, oral presentation and research information will be focused upon in the first semester of the Foundation Year. In their studies of arts, communication and humanities students will begin by looking at key issues before applying academic concepts and theories to these.

Teaching

- Student-Led Enquiry: The main form of teaching session will be seminars and workshops, where concepts and skills introduced by the lecturer will be learned through practical application – specific tasks, problem-solving and discussion, with regular provision of formative feedback on those activities.
- Directed Activities: Although students will not undertake directed activities at Level 0, students will be set regular activities that will require completion outside formal classes. Formative feedback will be provided on these.

- Use of VLE: To support student-led inquiry, learning materials and resources are supplied in advance via Moodle. Resources offered include bespoke videos and podcasts; links to external sites and online resources; online quizzes; and access to all handouts, powerpoints, etc. In addition, all seminars will be followed by a student-led summary of key points learned and discussed, posted on Moodle.
- Use of other online resources and technology: Full use will be made, in teaching sessions, independent study, and assessment, of online resources available to support an understanding of image, the modern media and academic skills.

Assessment:

- Formative Assessment: Students will have access to formative assessment in every module that they study on. This will usually take the form of feedback on specific tasks given in teaching sessions, online feedback, or feedback on outline plans for assessed work.
- Diversity of Assessment methods: Assessment methods will be varied in form and credit value.
- Negotiated Assessment: Students will have the opportunity, in SOC/SHN/LAW/CYP/BMM/COM/HUM3103 Project to negotiate the mode of assessment for a particular assignment. Forms of negotiated assessment might include: video, podcast, written project.
