

Programme Specification

With effect from: September 2024

A programme specification is the definitive record of your programme of study at the University. It sets out the aims, learning outcomes, and indicative content of the programme. You should read this programme specification alongside the relevant module descriptors and the University's Taught Programme Academic Regulations.

This specification only applies to the delivery of the programme indicated below. The details in this specification are subject to change through the modifications or periodic review processes.

1 Programme name and award

This programme specification relates to the following award(s)

BA (Hons) Criminology

2 Aims of the programme

Rationale and general aims, including what is special about this programme

This programme has been developed against the UK Quality Code for Higher Education's Subject Benchmark Statement for Criminology (2019), which defines the academic standards that can be expected of a graduate. These benchmarks are informed by the acknowledgement that Criminology as a subject has developed and continues to evolve from a range of human and social science disciplines; thus making Criminology a 'rendezvous' subject.

The overall approach to the BA (Hons) Criminology degree programme and associated route ways is to develop a critical appreciation of the relationship between the individual and social aspects of crime, punishment and victimisation. It aims to develop knowledge and understanding of the core schools of criminological thought, their historical and political underpinnings in conjunction with their practical application. The Criminology degree programme is built around a core set of modules which, from the first year, lay the foundations of the study of Criminology. This is achieved through exposure to the primary theoretical interpretations of the causes of crime and the various public and private responses to it. It sets the study of the subject in a historical and political framework to ensure there is a full understanding of the environment in which crime occurs and in which society deals with and accommodates to it.

As such, you will develop a highly analytical, critical world view underpinned by criminological theory, explore and examine the empirical and research skills necessary for the social sciences, and develop a professional portfolio of work through work placements in your second and third years that complement and build on your studies.

This programme also explores and challenges the self-image of the social sciences and their historical roots. Traditionally, for example, Criminology is perceived as originating in Europe and this has consequently privileged Eurocentric accounts and views of the world. Whilst Criminology has been an influential discipline in many ways throughout its history, it is important to address these legacies and influences, particularly when they are used as justifications for the perpetuation of social injustices and inequalities. In grappling with its challenging past and with contemporary critiques of Criminology this programme asks you to consider the role that Criminology should play in the 21st century.

Combined, these strands deliver a programme that is responsive to transformations in social life equipping you with a wide range of social science skills that will contribute to your academic and professional success.

3 Level Learning Outcomes and Employability Outcomes

Learning outcomes are expressed in terms of:

- Knowledge and understanding (K)
- Intellectual / cognitive / 'thinking' skills (I)
- Practical skills specific to the subject (P)
- Employability skills (E)

We design assessment tasks to enable you to demonstrate the Level Learning Outcomes and relevant Employability Outcomes for your level of study. To a greater or lesser extent, all Level Learning Outcomes at each level of your study are embedded in the assessment task(s) at that level. This means we can take a more integrated view of your overall performance at a level.

To progress to the next level, or to receive an award, you will need to satisfy the Level Learning Outcomes below and relevant Employability Outcomes and achieve credit as per the Taught Programme Academic Regulations.

5 Indicative Content

Summary of content by theme

At the start of this learning journey, we will manage the transition into university by introducing students to core criminological knowledge and promoting development of intellectual thought, research, employability and independent learning skills. In second year, students will refine these skills and develop critical thinking. The final stages of the degree involve application of these skills in research, real world, and employability contexts, ensuring that students are well-rounded, employable graduates who can easily adapt to the continuing societal changes presented in the 21st century.

Specifically, the first year will focus on the fundamental tenants of criminology, with such modules as "Introduction to Criminology" introducing students to the key theoretical schools and perspectives within the subject area. In particular, this module will help students to understand theories of crime and punishment, and research in its global and historical context before considering how the criminal justice system shapes societies views criminals and victims of crime. Students will also learn how to retrieve and organise information effectively, handle primary source material critically, and begin to make critical judgements in our study skills module. By taking part in a wide range of modules that cover a number of disciplines, students will gain a more holistic understanding of the unique route-ways we offer, and provides students with the means to make an informed decision with regards to what to study in second and third year.

In the second year, "Crime, Media, Culture" introduces students to how media platforms such as newspapers, TV, and films influences and shapes our understandings of crime whilst our "Victimology" module builds upon the theoretical foundations introduced in the previous year by further challenging conventional understandings and perceptions of crime and its victims. Our research and placement module designed to enhance students' employability development.

In the third and final year, modules provide attention to current and criminological oriented affairs, such as "Justice, Punishment and Human Rights". Such modules draw students' attention to global and current events that seeks to build upon the theoretical frameworks presented in the previous two years, whilst also emphasising the importance of applying such theories into real-world contexts and scenarios. student will be expected to complete our “Dissertation” module which will enable them to focus on their areas of interest and apply their knowledge and skills which they have accumulated throughout their time with us. Alongside this each student will also undertake our “Professional Learning Through Work” module that will enable them to gain and develop professional experience during their final year of study.
